CLINICAL FOCUS

A significant part of Dr. Baghirov's work concerns the first weeks and months of life. He carries out newborn follow-up, coordinates and interprets newborn screening tests, and manages neonatal jaundice treatment. He also evaluates infant colic and feeding-related discomfort, offering parents guidance on what is expected in a healthy newborn and when further assessment may be appropriate.

For older infants, children, and adolescents, Dr. Baghirov assesses and treats febrile seizures, childhood infectious diseases, and upper respiratory tract infections in children, including cough and upper respiratory symptoms as well as skin rashes. He evaluates iron deficiency and anemia in children, constipation in children, and childhood urinary incontinence.
