CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Çiçek's areas of expertise lie within emergency medicine. He assesses and manages trauma patients, where the early priorities are identifying injuries, supporting vital functions, and deciding on further investigation or referral. A further area of interest is environmental emergencies, including drowning, acute hypoxia, and airway obstruction.

He also deals with insect bites and stings, including bee stings and tick bites. The clinical picture after a bite or sting varies considerably: some patients need only local care and observation, while others require closer monitoring and treatment because of the way their body reacts or because of the risk of later complications. Emergency assessment aims to distinguish these situations and to plan appropriate follow-up.
