CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Kaya's work is focused on the initial assessment and management of patients who present with acute conditions. This includes emergency interventions for a range of urgent medical problems and trauma care, where the priorities are timely evaluation, stabilization, and coordination with other specialties when further treatment is required.

These include drowning and related incidents, acute hypoxia (an acute shortage of oxygen reaching the body's tissues), and airway obstruction, in which the passage of air to the lungs is partly or completely blocked. In these situations, early recognition and securing adequate oxygenation and a clear airway are central to emergency management. Dr.
