CLINICAL FOCUS

Ali Demir's primary area is pediatric rehabilitation. This begins with a physiotherapy assessment, in which he evaluates the child's movement, strength, posture and functional abilities and identifies the areas that need attention. Based on this assessment he plans a program that may include therapeutic exercise, manual therapy and functional rehabilitation, with the aim of supporting the child's ability to carry out everyday...

Pain management is a further field named on this profile. In the context of pediatric rehabilitation, this involves considering how pain affects a child's movement and participation and taking it into account when planning exercises and hands-on treatment. The specific approach depends on the individual child, the findings of the assessment and the treatment goals agreed with the family.
