CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Arifoğlu's practice covers radiotherapy for several groups of cancer patients. He treats head and neck cancers, where radiation planning must take into account the position of the tumor in relation to surrounding structures such as the airway, salivary glands and spinal cord.

His areas of expertise further include gastrointestinal oncology, covering radiotherapy for cancers of the digestive tract, and brachytherapy, a form of radiation treatment in which a radioactive source is placed inside or very close to the tumor. Whether external radiotherapy, brachytherapy or a combination is appropriate depends on the diagnosis, the stage of disease, previous treatments and the patient's general health;
