CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Kol's clinical work centers on the care of patients who require anesthesia and on the closely related fields of intensive care and reanimation. In intensive care treatment, this involves the continuous monitoring and support of critically ill patients whose vital functions may be compromised, including the management of breathing, circulation and medication.

Pain management is a further part of his practice. Depending on the individual situation, this may include assessing the source and pattern of pain, reviewing treatments that have already been tried and discussing options that range from medication to interventional pain management approaches.
