CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Chousein assesses and manages a range of conditions seen in infants, children, and adolescents. Acute presentations in his practice include croup, childhood upper respiratory tract infections, and childhood rash illnesses, as well as Kawasaki disease, a condition that requires timely recognition and follow-up.

Nutritional and gastrointestinal concerns form another part of his work. These include rickets, iron deficiency and anemia in children, childhood constipation, lactose intolerance in infants, and infant colic. Alongside the management of specific conditions, Dr. Chousein provides general child and adolescent health assessment, taking into account each patient's age, symptoms, and developmental needs.
