CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Koç's surgical practice covers tonsil surgery and the assessment and treatment of adenoid conditions, which are common reasons for ENT referral in children and can also affect adults. She evaluates patients with snoring to identify possible contributing factors in the nose, palate and throat and to discuss suitable options.

A further area of her practice is the assessment of vertigo and balance disorders. Because dizziness can arise from the inner ear as well as from other causes, Dr. Koç's approach centers on a careful history, a clinical examination and, where appropriate, further testing before treatment options are discussed. The aim is to clarify the likely source of symptoms and to plan care that is proportionate to the findings.
