CLINICAL FOCUS

A large part of Dr. Akçakoca's practice is devoted to conditions of the gums. He assesses and treats gingivitis, the early inflammatory stage of gum disease, as well as more advanced gum disease that can affect the bone and other tissues holding the teeth in place.

Dr. Akçakoca also carries out tooth extraction and places dental implants, which are used to replace missing teeth when the surrounding gum and bone are suitable. In addition, his clinical interests include temporomandibular joint disorders, which involve the joint connecting the jaw to the skull and the muscles around it, and botulinum toxin applications in dentistry.
