CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Babayeva's practice covers the everyday concerns of child and adolescent health as well as conditions that call for careful evaluation. She assesses and manages infant colic, upper respiratory tract illnesses in children, and urinary incontinence in children, and she evaluates hematuria (blood in the urine), a finding that can have a range of causes and generally requires...

A further area of her work is childhood rash illnesses. Dr. Babayeva evaluates children with chickenpox, measles, and rubella, and she is involved in the recognition and management of Kawasaki disease, an inflammatory condition in children that presents with fever and rash and for which timely assessment is important.
