CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Kılıç's work is centered on the anesthetic care of patients around the time of surgery. Anesthesia assessment involves reviewing a patient's medical history, current medications, previous anesthetic experiences and relevant test results before a procedure, so that any factors that may affect the choice or conduct of anesthesia can be identified in advance.

Perioperative care covers the period before, during and immediately after an operation. During this time, the anesthesiologist is responsible for administering anesthesia and for following the patient's vital functions throughout the procedure. Postoperative monitoring continues this observation after surgery, with attention to recovery from anesthesia, pain control and the early detection of any problems.
