CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Arcagök's areas of expertise are concentrated in neonatal medicine. He cares for infants born prematurely, whose organs may not yet be fully developed and who often require close monitoring of breathing, feeding, temperature and growth.

He also treats hypoxic-ischemic encephalopathy (HIE), a form of brain injury that can occur when a newborn's brain does not receive enough oxygen or blood flow around the time of birth. Assessment and management of HIE involve careful clinical observation and coordination with the wider care team. In addition, Dr.
