CLINICAL FOCUS

A large part of Dr. Baş's practice involves the first weeks and months of life. She follows newborns after birth, evaluates and manages newborn jaundice, and supports families dealing with infant colic. Well-child monitoring is another core area of her work: she follows growth and development over time and carries out childhood vaccinations in line with the schedule...

Dr. Baş also evaluates and treats common illnesses of childhood. These include upper respiratory tract infections in children, iron deficiency and anemia in children, and chickenpox. Her approach in these conditions is to take a careful history, examine the child, request laboratory tests where they are clinically indicated, and explain the findings and the management options...
