CLINICAL FOCUS

The core of Dr. Köse's work is intensive care and critical care management. Patients admitted to an intensive care unit may have serious illnesses, may be recovering from major surgery or may have experienced a sudden deterioration in their condition.

Patient monitoring is a central part of this work. Continuous observation of vital functions such as breathing, circulation and organ function allows changes to be recognized and addressed as they occur. Dr. Köse's training in anesthesiology and reanimation supports this aspect of critical care, including the management of patients who need support for breathing or circulation and the stabilization of patients in acute...
