CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. İşkorur's work is concentrated on the acute assessment and management of patients presenting to the emergency department. A central part of his practice is trauma care, in which injured patients are evaluated, stabilized and directed to further treatment as their condition requires.

Another area of interest is environmental emergencies. These include drowning and related incidents, as well as reactions to bee stings and complications of tick bites. In these situations, care typically involves assessing the severity of the exposure, monitoring the patient's condition and providing supportive and symptom-directed treatment in the emergency setting.
