CLINICAL FOCUS

A significant part of her practice relates to spine health, including spine-related pain, facet joint syndrome, and tethered cord syndrome. She also works with patients who have muscle and nerve diseases and restless legs syndrome, and she provides movement disorders treatment, in which rehabilitation aims to support mobility and everyday function.

Pain-related conditions form another area of her work. These include frozen shoulder, chronic muscle pain, and fibromyalgia, for which rehabilitation and pain treatment may be combined depending on the clinical picture. She also addresses pelvic pain and functional disorders through pelvic floor rehabilitation.
