CLINICAL FOCUS

A substantial part of Dr. Matben's practice concerns the first weeks and months of life. This includes newborn follow-up, in which growth, feeding and development are monitored over a series of visits, and the assessment of neonatal jaundice, where the level of bilirubin and the age of the infant guide whether observation or treatment is...

In older children and adolescents, her work centers on child and adolescent health and on the common illnesses of childhood. She evaluates and treats upper respiratory tract infections and croup, an inflammation of the upper airway that produces a characteristic cough and can affect breathing in young children.
