CLINICAL FOCUS

Emre Erden's practice centers on the assessment and rehabilitation of mobility and movement. He performs gait analysis to evaluate walking patterns and uses robotic rehabilitation as part of structured rehabilitation programs. His work in spine health addresses spine-related complaints, and he applies manual therapy techniques where clinically appropriate.

A further area of his practice involves neuromuscular conditions and movement disorders, including Parkinson's rehabilitation. He provides respiratory therapy and rehabilitation for patients whose breathing function may benefit from targeted exercise and training. His clinical interests also include fibromyalgia, for which rehabilitation approaches may form part of a broader management plan.
