CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Demirel's clinical interests lie in three closely related areas. In intensive care treatment, he is involved in the care of patients whose condition requires continuous monitoring and organ support, including those recovering from major surgery or managing serious acute illness.

Advanced life support refers to the structured management of patients whose vital functions are acutely threatened, covering airway management, circulatory support and the coordinated steps taken during resuscitation. In palliative care, Dr. Demirel's focus is on relieving symptoms and supporting comfort for patients with serious or advanced illness.
