CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Canbaz works in general ophthalmology, the branch of medicine concerned with the eye and vision. Patients may present with a new symptom, such as a change in vision or discomfort in the eye, or with a known diagnosis that requires ongoing care. In each case, the physician takes a history, examines the eyes and decides which further assessment is needed before discussing a plan.

Visual health assessment and ophthalmic follow-up are a further part of the practice. A visual health assessment gives an overview of the current condition of the eyes and vision and can identify problems that may benefit from further attention. Follow-up visits allow an existing eye condition to be monitored over time and a treatment plan to be reviewed and adjusted when necessary.
