CLINICAL FOCUS

The central area of Dr. Kılıç's practice is the imaging of breast diseases. Breast imaging is used to look for and characterize changes in breast tissue, to help distinguish findings that need further attention from those that do not, and to follow known conditions over time.

Two imaging methods are at the core of his work. Mammography is an X-ray based examination of the breast that is used both in screening and in the assessment of specific symptoms or findings. Ultrasonographic imaging uses sound waves rather than radiation and is frequently used alongside mammography to examine a palpable finding, to look more closely at an area seen on a mammogram, or to evaluate breast tissue in situations...
