CLINICAL FOCUS

Anesthesiology involves the assessment of patients before a procedure, the administration and monitoring of anesthesia during it, and care in the recovery period. As an anesthesiologist with a subspecialty in intensive care, Dr. Şamlı is also involved in the care of patients who need close monitoring and organ support, whether after major surgery or because of an acute illness.

His practice also includes palliative care, which focuses on relieving symptoms and maintaining comfort for patients with serious or advanced illness, alongside the treatment provided by other specialties. In pain management, the aim is to assess the nature and likely source of pain and to select measures that are appropriate for the individual patient.
