CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Karaça's clinical interests cover the main modalities of diagnostic radiology. In ultrasonography, he performs and interprets ultrasound examinations, which use sound waves rather than ionizing radiation and are often among the first imaging studies requested when a clinical question arises; this includes renal ultrasonography, the ultrasound assessment of the kidneys.

Dr. Karaça also works in mammography, the X-ray imaging of the breast used in the evaluation of breast tissue. Across all of these modalities, his role is to help the referring team select an appropriate examination, to ensure the study is performed in a way that answers the clinical question, and to provide a written report describing the findings.
