CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Demir's clinical work covers two closely related areas: cancer treatment planning and the ongoing medical management of cancer. Treatment planning refers to the process of reviewing a patient's diagnosis, prior investigations and general health in order to define an appropriate course of oncological treatment.

The medical management of cancer involves the oncologist's role in directing and supervising drug-based and other non-surgical aspects of cancer care over time, monitoring how the patient responds and adjusting the plan as needed. Decisions in medical oncology are made on an individual basis and depend on the type and stage of the disease, previous treatments and the patient's overall condition. For this reason, Dr.
