CLINICAL FOCUS

A large part of Dr. Malişi's practice involves the assessment and treatment of childhood infectious diseases. This includes evaluating fever and other signs of infection in infants and children, deciding which tests are appropriate, and planning treatment and follow-up according to the child's age and condition.

Her work with the youngest patients covers newborn follow-up, including routine newborn screening tests and the assessment and treatment of newborn jaundice. She also advises parents on infant gas pain, a common concern in the first months of life, offering assessment and practical guidance. Throughout, Dr. Malişi aims to give families clear, age-appropriate explanations and a follow-up plan they can understand.
