CLINICAL FOCUS

A substantial part of Dr. Caneroğlu's practice involves patients with movement disorders. This includes the assessment and treatment of essential tremor and the long-term care of people living with Parkinson's disease. He also evaluates and treats patients with neuromuscular diseases, which affect the nerves and muscles and may present with weakness, fatigue or changes in movement and sensation.

Memory and cognitive complaints form another area of his work. Dr. Caneroğlu sees patients with memory loss, dementia and Alzheimer's disease, as well as other age-related neurological conditions. In addition, his clinical interests include epilepsy, dizziness, headache and migraine.
