CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Turan's practice centers on pediatric endocrine disorders. A central part of this work concerns hormonal disorders in children, in which the glands that regulate growth, metabolism, puberty and other body functions may produce too much or too little of a given hormone.

Growth disorders in children form a further area of her work. Assessment of a child's growth generally includes a review of the medical and family history, measurement of height and weight over time, a clinical examination and, where indicated, laboratory testing.
