Dr. Fistikçi's clinical work centers on the care of critically ill patients. Intensive care treatment involves the monitoring and support of patients whose vital functions are unstable, and advanced life support covers the structured measures used when breathing or circulation fail.

He also works in palliative care, which focuses on relieving symptoms and supporting comfort for patients with serious illness, and in pain management. The suitability of any particular approach depends on the individual patient's condition and is assessed on a case-by-case basis after clinical evaluation.
