CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Haji's listed area of expertise is exercise stress testing. In general terms, an exercise stress test is a monitored assessment in which the patient exercises, usually on a treadmill or a stationary bicycle, while heart rate, blood pressure and the electrocardiogram are recorded. The aim is to observe how the heart and circulation respond to physical effort.

As an inpatient clinic physician, Dr. Haji supports day-to-day medical care and communication within the hospital care team. This includes monitoring admitted patients, following the course of their treatment, coordinating with the treating specialists and helping patients understand the next steps in their care.
