CLINICAL FOCUS

The core of Huri Aydoğan's work is the measurement and interpretation of hearing. Audiometry is used to establish how well a patient hears sounds of different frequencies and intensities, and it forms the basis for identifying and describing hearing loss. The results help the treating physician understand the type and degree of a hearing problem and consider which next steps may be appropriate.

Paediatric hearing loss is a particular area of her practice. Assessing hearing in infants and young children requires methods that do not rely on the child's active participation. BERA (ABR) testing, which records the electrical responses of the hearing pathway to sound, is one such method and is used both in children and in adults who cannot complete a conventional hearing test.

INTERNATIONAL PATIENTS

Huri Aydoğan speaks Turkish and English, and interpreters can be arranged for patients who speak other languages. For patients coming from abroad, the international patient team coordinates the collection of prior reports and imaging, such as earlier hearing tests, MRI or CT reports, laboratory results and discharge summaries, and arranges appointments and the hospital visit.
