CLINICAL FOCUS

A large part of Dr. Karabay's practice consists of well-child follow-up: reviewing growth and development, nutrition and age-appropriate health needs in infants, children and adolescents. She also monitors childhood nutritional disorders and evaluates iron deficiency and anemia in children, conditions that are often identified during...

Her clinical interests further include the acute and recurrent problems that commonly bring families to a pediatrician. These include croup and other upper respiratory tract infections in children, constipation in children, and infant colic and gas pain in the first months of life.
