CLINICAL FOCUS

The condition listed in Dr. Tamer's area of expertise is inguinal hernia. An inguinal hernia occurs when tissue, such as part of the intestine or fatty tissue, pushes through a weak point in the abdominal wall in the groin region. It may present as a visible bulge, discomfort or a feeling of heaviness in the groin, particularly when standing, lifting or straining.

In a consultation for a suspected or confirmed inguinal hernia, Dr. Tamer reviews the patient's history and symptoms, performs a clinical examination and considers any existing imaging or reports. The available options are then discussed with the patient so that a plan can be made that takes the individual situation into account.
