CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Koyunseven's work centers on the two areas listed in her profile. Infectious diseases as a specialty is concerned with the assessment and management of patients whose symptoms may be caused by an infection, including the interpretation of clinical findings alongside laboratory and imaging results.

Because infections can affect many organ systems, infectious diseases physicians often work together with colleagues from other departments. Further general information on the management of infections of the nervous system is available on this site's page on neuroinfectious diseases treatment.
