CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Şahin's clinical interests include burn treatment, trauma care, toxicology, and emergency interventions. In burn treatment, the initial assessment of the injury and the planning of inpatient care are central concerns. In trauma care, patients who have sustained injuries are evaluated and monitored so that further treatment can be organized as needed.

A further part of his work concerns environmental emergencies. These include drowning and acute hypoxia, in which the body's oxygen supply is critically reduced; airway obstruction, which may require prompt intervention to secure breathing; and bee stings and tick bites, which in some patients can lead to reactions or complications that require medical assessment and observation.
