CLINICAL FOCUS

A substantial part of Dr. Yeni's work concerns the newborn period. She provides newborn follow-up, carries out newborn screening tests and manages neonatal jaundice treatment. She also evaluates and advises on infant colic, a common concern for parents in the first months of life.

Dr. Yeni diagnoses and treats childhood infections, including upper respiratory tract illnesses in children. She assesses iron deficiency and anemia in children as well as childhood nutrition disorders, which may require laboratory investigation, dietary guidance and follow-up over time. She also evaluates developmental disorders in children;
