CLINICAL FOCUS

A large part of Dr. Batmacı's work involves the medical treatment of common internal medicine conditions. This includes the assessment of anemia, where the aim is to identify the underlying cause and plan appropriate medical treatment, and the management of hypertension, which typically involves reviewing blood pressure readings, existing medication and associated health risks.

Another area of her practice is the digestive organs. Dr. Batmacı sees patients with liver diseases, including fatty liver disease and liver failure, as well as pancreatic diseases and biliary tract diseases. In these cases, a consultation generally focuses on interpreting laboratory results and imaging, clarifying the diagnosis and discussing medical treatment options.
