CLINICAL FOCUS

The clinical focus of Dr. Bozkuş lies in emergency medicine, in particular environmental emergencies. These are acute situations that arise from exposure to external conditions or hazards rather than from a chronic underlying disease. Within this field, he has a specific interest in bee stings, which can range from a localized reaction to a more serious systemic response that requires prompt evaluation and observation in an...

A further area of his work concerns drowning and the conditions that frequently accompany it, namely acute hypoxia and airway obstruction. In these situations the emergency assessment is directed at the patient's breathing, oxygenation and airway, followed by the management appropriate to the individual case.
