CLINICAL FOCUS

A significant part of Dr. Güven's practice involves the digestive complaints of infancy and early childhood. He evaluates infants with colic and gas pain, assesses babies with suspected infant lactose intolerance, and manages childhood constipation.

Dr. Güven also assesses children with iron deficiency and anemia, and with urinary findings such as hematuria and urinary incontinence. His experience extends to Kawasaki disease, a condition that requires timely recognition in young children, and to the upper respiratory tract illnesses that are frequent in this age group.
