CLINICAL FOCUS

Clinical biochemistry involves the measurement of chemical substances in blood, urine and other body fluids, and the interpretation of those measurements in the context of a patient's clinical picture. Dr. Eminağaoğlu's work in this field supports physicians across the hospital who rely on laboratory data when assessing symptoms, following the course of a condition or...

A particular area of his training and experience is pre-analytical systems. The pre-analytical phase includes everything that happens before a sample is analyzed: patient preparation, sample collection, labeling, transport, storage and processing.
