CLINICAL FOCUS

A large part of Dr. Tümüklü's work concerns coronary artery disease and the atherosclerosis that underlies it. He evaluates patients with angina and those who have had a heart attack, using clinical assessment and angiography to define the extent and location of coronary narrowing. Where the findings support it, he performs percutaneous coronary intervention to restore blood flow through a narrowed or blocked coronary artery.

Valve disease is a second area of his practice. Dr. Tümüklü assesses heart murmurs, rheumatic heart disease and mitral regurgitation, and advises on monitoring or further treatment depending on the severity of the findings. His clinical interests also include heart rhythm disorders and pacemakers, as well as atrial septal defects.
