CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Temizsoy's work covers the two broad branches of his specialty. Aesthetic plastic surgery addresses changes in appearance that a patient wishes to discuss, and the decision about whether a procedure is appropriate is made individually after examination and a careful conversation about expectations, alternatives and possible risks.

Reconstructive plastic surgery concerns the restoration of form and function after injury, disease or congenital differences. Here the emphasis lies on the medical indication, the tissue available for reconstruction and the realistic goals of treatment. In many cases reconstructive care is planned together with colleagues from other departments, and the sequence and timing of any operation depend on the underlying condition.
