CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Durhan's clinical work centers on the assessment and initial management of patients who arrive in the emergency department with acute or time-sensitive problems. This includes trauma of varying severity and environmental emergencies, a group of conditions caused by exposure to the surrounding environment rather than by an underlying illness.

He also manages acute hypoxia, in which the body's tissues do not receive enough oxygen, and airway obstruction, in which the passage of air to the lungs is partly or completely blocked. Both conditions call for prompt recognition and stabilization, and Dr.
