CLINICAL FOCUS

A large part of Dr. Çelebi's practice concerns the problems that bring families to a children's doctor most often. In infants, this includes infant colic and gas pain, which he assesses in the context of feeding, growth and the baby's overall condition.

Dr. Çelebi manages several childhood infectious diseases, including measles, scarlet fever and rubella, where the diagnosis, the child's general condition and the possibility of complications guide the approach.
