CLINICAL FOCUS

The clinical work of Dr. Karakoç covers the core tasks of an Emergency Service physician. The first of these is emergency assessment: when a patient arrives, he takes a focused history, performs a clinical examination and determines how urgent the situation is, so that the most time-critical problems are addressed first. This assessment guides the choice of any diagnostic tests and the order in which care is delivered.

He also provides initial emergency treatment and urgent medical care. This includes starting appropriate first-line measures for acute symptoms and conditions, monitoring the patient's response and deciding whether the patient can be treated and discharged from the emergency department or should be admitted or referred to a specialist team.
