CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Doksöz evaluates and follows children with congenital heart diseases, including atrial septal defect (ASD). His clinical interests also include cardiomyopathy, heart failure and heart valve problems in pediatric patients, as well as the assessment of arrhythmias.

A further area of his work is fetal echocardiography and prenatal cardiac diagnosis. This ultrasound-based examination of the fetal heart during pregnancy can help identify structural heart abnormalities before birth, which allows families and the treating teams to plan follow-up and care around delivery. Findings are interpreted in the context of the pregnancy and, where appropriate, in coordination with the obstetric team.
