CLINICAL FOCUS

A significant part of Dr. Barlas's work involves trauma, which covers injuries of varying severity that require timely evaluation and stabilization. In the emergency setting, the priority is to identify the injuries present, assess the patient's overall condition and direct care according to the most pressing clinical needs. He also has particular interest in insect bites and stings, including bee stings and tick bites.

Dr. Barlas's expertise further extends to environmental emergencies. This group includes drowning, acute hypoxia and airway obstruction, all of which can compromise breathing and oxygen supply and therefore call for rapid recognition and intervention. In such cases the emergency physician's role is to secure the airway, support oxygenation and monitor the patient closely while the underlying cause is addressed.
