CLINICAL FOCUS

Endodontic treatment addresses problems inside the tooth, most often when the inner tissue has become inflamed or infected. Dr. Akgün assesses patients with tooth root infections, which may present with pain, sensitivity or swelling, and discusses whether the tooth can be treated and preserved or whether tooth extraction is a more appropriate option.

Her work also includes dental fillings, which are used to restore teeth affected by decay or minor damage, and the assessment of bad breath, a complaint that can have several causes and is evaluated as part of a general examination of the mouth and teeth. Where a filling, endodontic treatment or extraction is proposed, Dr.
