CLINICAL FOCUS

Dr. Mikailova's work covers three closely related areas: clinical laboratory medicine, medical biochemistry and diagnostic laboratory assessment. Clinical laboratory medicine concerns the analysis of patient samples and the interpretation of the results in the context of a patient's clinical picture.

In practice, much of her role takes place away from the consultation room. Rather than seeing patients in an outpatient clinic in the way a treating specialist does, she supports the physicians who order laboratory tests by helping to ensure that samples are handled appropriately, that analyses are performed and interpreted in a reliable way, and that unexpected or borderline findings are considered carefully.
