CLINICAL FOCUS

A significant part of Dr. Şekerci's practice relates to toxicology and poisoning-related concerns. This includes the evaluation of patients who may have been exposed to medications, chemicals, or other substances, with management guided by the suspected agent, the timing of exposure, and the patient's clinical condition.

Environmental emergencies form a distinct group within his areas of expertise. Drowning, acute hypoxia, and airway obstruction are conditions in which the ability to breathe and oxygenate is compromised, and the emergency response focuses on securing the airway, supporting breathing, and monitoring the patient closely. Dr. Şekerci also sees patients with bee stings and tick bites.
