CLINICAL FOCUS

A large part of Dr. Tamer's work is preventive: well-child monitoring of age-appropriate growth and development, and childhood vaccinations. Within general pediatric care, she assesses and manages upper respiratory tract infections in children, constipation in children, and iron deficiency and anemia in children.

Dr. Tamer also sees children with rash illnesses of childhood, including chickenpox and measles, and children who have experienced febrile seizures. In each case, the approach is based on the child's history, a clinical examination, and, where indicated, laboratory testing, with the aim of reaching a diagnosis and agreeing on a...
